When flying to the bush

Flying in the bush can be a rewarding and engaging experience. Spectacular aerial views of the African bush and the marvels of nature can be enjoyed by our passengers whilst in flight. Operating in the bush airstrips presents different challenges to a more conventional airport, and the flights are susceptible to unique situations that do not affect conventional services.

- Flight departures and arrivals can vary by as much as 45 minutes. Each day of flying is planned 24 hours in advance. Our route structure is constantly changing due to variations in the daily inbound / outbound activity of each lodge. It is not unusual on some days for a lodge not have a single guest arriving or departing. This means that we will never know our exact routing until the day before arrival or departure.
- Aircraft are often delayed due to animals obstructing the runway - especially during winter when the animals are attracted to the warmth being radiated from the airstrips. When animals are present, we coerce them off the airstrip to allow for a safe landing or take-off.

Arrival at bush game lodge

- Johannesburg International Airport is one of the busiest airports in the Southern Hemisphere. As such we often incur Air Traffic Control delays due to aircraft congestion.
- The weather in southern Africa can present spectacular thunderstorms which can affect our departure schedule. This is because we always plan our flights in the best possible weather.
- We place our guests' safety above all other concerns. Our 15 years of experience helps us to ensure that our guests always enjoy a smooth, comfortable transfer

Arriving at the game lodge

Most game lodge airstrips are located a fair distance from the actual lodge. This is to ensure that guests at the lodge are not disturbed by the sounds of incoming and departing aircraft. Transport between the airstrip and the lodge will be provided by the game lodge. We constantly update the lodge representatives with all flight details so they are well prepared for our guests' arrival.
